CIA Developers Taking Applications for 2010 Gary R. Cunningham Entrepreneurial Award

Award offers $10,000 in free rent to Brevard's top Entrepreneur

MELBOURNE, Fla., August 25, 2009 – CIA Developers will begin taking applications, Tuesday September 1st for the second annual Gary R. Cunningham Entrepreneurial Award. The award, named in honor of CIA Developers founder Gary R. Cunningham, will seek out, identify and reward an entrepreneur who best demonstrates an ability to develop and manage a business.

“Providing this award is great experience for us,” said Gary Cunningham II, VP of CIA Developers. “It gives us an opportunity to assist someone trying to bring innovation to the marketplace.”

The Gary R. Cunningham Award offers $10,000 in free rent at a CIA Developers' facility and a scholarship to the Technological Research & Development Authorities' Roadmap to Success. Applications and additional award information will be made available Tuesday September 1st, 2009 on CIA Developers website, www.cia-developers.com.

“Last year we recognized Quix Products, LLC., a company with a lot of promise,” said Buz Anderson, CEO of CIA Developers. “This year we are going to build on our past success and reward another aspiring entrepreneur.”

Gary R. Cunningham, a developer of speculative industrial real estate for lease, founded CIA Developers in 1981. His first project in Brevard County was Melbourne Business Park, a 123,000 square foot industrial park for lease and the first of its kind on John Rodes Blvd. CIA Developers now manages 1.2 million square feet of leasable office and industrial real estate.
